Subject:RE: revocation considerations

Good day,

Regarding this note in the document: There is intelligence available that suggests that as many as 5 members of the Soldiers of Odin (IMVE) are present at one of the truck gatherings in British Columbia. Their presence is assessed as increasing the likelihood of further illegal protest activities and possible violence; however, law enforcement agencies continue to assess the situation as manageable within existing authorities.

We reached into our CO in BC on the reference to the Soldiers of Odin and noted that there was one intel 'report' that came into their DEOC. It was followed up and there was no evidence of their presence. He further notes that there has been no sighting of, or interactions with representatives of this group at any of the POEs in the region.

PROTECTED B / PROTÉGÉ B

Jeff,

Great work. A few comments:

Add a sentence at from to describe the purpose of the document

In section 1 would adjust to make it clear the EA powers were necessary not just useful. IE reframe, don't say they "assisted" but rather say they were "essential" in the unprecedented law enforcement operations to restore law and order to the streets and keep the POEs clear after three weeks of occupations. And adjust wording in the benefits to be consistent with that logic flow. We need the correct framing of the basis for the original decision in our docs, even if that is not the purpose.

Helpful to be clear on the timing of Coutts – I think we can make the case the resolution came after the declaration which gave protestors a sense their trucks could get seized (they did not realize the orders had yet to come).

It would be helpful if Brenda would validate each of the benefits under as you have asked Jeff.

In terms of assessment of the current situation, I would add a point that the security situation has steadily improved day by day since the massive operations of the weekend. To make this point, reference the trend in crowd size (even approximations) downtown, and number of trucks parked in the rural staging areas (both are declining based on what Brenda has been briefing). IE the assessment as of Feb 21 is better than the day before, to give a sense that we are evaluating daily and the conditions that are meriting aa revocation did not exist a day earlier.

It would be helpful if the points of assessment as of were connected to the key EA powers to get at the question that Minister and another Minister reframed. This would make it more analytical and persuasive. EG it is critical to have an assessment of tow truck supply, to assess the need for the tow truck provision (all signs are that it is no longer needed)

Agree with Rob we need a conclusion. And I think we are at the point where it can be clear: We still face unprecedented threats, But the situation has improved AND law enforcement capabilities and readiness have improved to the point where as of today the EA tools continue to be very useful but no longer strictly necessary, as per the high bar of the EA. Therefore we recommend initiating steps to revoke them. Still risk for the weekend across the country but we assess these as manageable risks

And agree on comms. Need strong comms, including intent to proceed with regulatory and legislative changes to address some of the most glaring gaps that required EA.

Michael

Subject: revocation considerations

Please find attached a document to guide a discussion on the appropriate time for revocation of the EA. You will all be aware of the short runway to the IRG tomorrow morning. If you have any comments, concerns or advice, please let me know first thing tomorrow and I will make any necessary changes.

There are a couple of outstanding issues:

- 1) Commissioner Lucki, we had input from the RCMP but I would be grateful if you or a senior officer could validate. I will send separately to Mark Flynn in an attempt to expedite.
- 2) Mike, you will see that I included the info about the Soldiers of Odin but would appreciate your taking a look at that para (highlighted in yellow)
- 3) Ken, I have not attempted a comm's plan. Generally I am not afraid to risk embarrassing myself but in this case it just seemed 100% likely. Call me first thing if you want to put our heads together on that (s.37)

A huge thanks to the many folks who contributed, with a special shout out to Samantha MD and Dom R.

Best regards
 Jeff
